

Actor brief & title screen

CHARACTER - applies to every line

The Wizard is old, gruff, rough-mannered and perpetually drunk - or, on his best nights, merely tipsy. His voice is weathered and slightly raspy, with loose articulation, uneven pauses and occasional drunken self-importance. Keep every word understandable.

Apply this character to every delivery note. Frightened, delighted or thoughtful, he is always the same scruffy, boozy old wizard. His wisdom is questionable, his manners are poor, and he takes his drinking very seriously.

WHAT TO RECORD

Record only text inside quotation marks. Do not read headings, IDs or acting directions. No additional spoken words or improvised lines. Total: 22 clips, 200 spoken words (6 title words + 194 night words). Contractions count as one word.

DELIVERY NOTES

Preferred format, unless agreed otherwise: mono WAV, 48 kHz / 24-bit, clean and dry, without music, reverb or character effects. Keep a consistent English accent. Leave a little clean room around each line.

Deliver one file per ID, for example TITLE_01.wav or NIGHT_09.wav. The two title versions are separate performances. Additional takes or pickups should be agreed separately; they are not included in this 200-word script.

TITLE_01 | Title screen / Version 1

[Low, gruff and mysterious. Announce the title with drunken grandeur, as though presenting your greatest magical achievement.]

“The Goodnight Potion.”

TITLE_02 | Title screen / Version 2

[Tipsy, cheeky and delighted. Savour Potion as though you can already taste it.]

“The Goodnight Potion!”

Night 01 - Night 05

NIGHT_01 | The Last One

[Sleepy and mischievous. Ask the question with careless confidence, dismissing any possible consequences.]

“One last potion before bed. What harm could it do?”

NIGHT_02 | Two for One

[Delighted by the bargain. Finish with the certainty of a drunk who considers this excellent reasoning.]

“Two lava potions for the price of one? Better drink both!”

NIGHT_03 | The Faster Conveyor

[Impatient enthusiasm. Brighten on more potions, then grumble about the waiting.]

“A faster conveyor means more potions, and less waiting.”

NIGHT_04 | It's Getting Dark

[Briefly uneasy, then smugly reassured. A potion is obviously the answer to everything.]

“Getting dark. Fortunately, there's a potion for that.”

NIGHT_05 | Detox

[Hangover and gravelly. The first sentence is a reluctant admission; the second is a lazy attempt at reassurance.]

“Too much lava last night. Healing scrolls should help.”

Night 06 - Night 10

NIGHT_06 | The Lever

[Bark out the opening in irritation. Follow with offended pride and a dismissive grumble.]

“Wrong direction! Never trust a machine with a wizard’s job.”

NIGHT_07 | The Bald Rogue

[Quiet and suspicious, peering into the dark. His curiosity slightly outweighs his fear.]

“What’s hiding in the darkness down here?”

NIGHT_08 | I Can Stop Whenever I Want...

[Defensive and stubborn. Pause between sentences, then deliver the excuse with smug conviction.]

“I can stop whenever I want. I simply don’t want to.”

NIGHT_09 | Dark Thoughts

[Unexpectedly thoughtful, like a drunk discovering profound wisdom. Pause briefly after swallow, then warmly emphasize the light.]

“Darkness is easier to swallow after you’ve seen the light.”

NIGHT_10 | The Vortex

[Dizzy and fascinated. Let round and round roll lazily off the tongue as he follows the movement.]

“Everything comes in pairs, going round and round.”

Night 11 - Night 15

NIGHT_11 | One Nail Drives Out Another

[Firmly announce the decision to stop, then immediately soften into another convenient excuse.]

“I’ll stop now. A little weed should take the edge off.”

NIGHT_12 | Something Fishy

[Squinting at a damaged label. Deliver the second sentence with dry resignation, hardly concerned about the missing information.]

“The label says seaweed. The rest was washed away.”

NIGHT_13 | So Dark

[Warm, tipsy philosophy. Emphasize a few glasses with the knowing confidence of an experienced drinker.]

“A few glasses are enough to brighten the night.”

NIGHT_14 | It’s Cold

[Shivering and gruff at first, then visibly warming to the thought of another drink.]

“Cold nights call for a little liquid fire.”

NIGHT_15 | One Night at a Time

Night 16 - Night 20

NIGHT_16 | The Devil Inside

[Cold and tempted. Lower the voice conspiratorially on that devil, then finish with growing interest.]

“So cold... and that devil keeps offering to warm me up.”

NIGHT_17 | Both Moons Shining

[Casually choosing a drink, then distracted by the sky. Pause before Both of them, sincerely impressed by his double vision.]

“Which poison tonight? The moons look beautiful. Both of them.”

NIGHT_18 | Shower? Nah...

[Genuinely trying to remember. Pause, then dismiss the matter with shameless indifference.]

“When did I last shower? It can wait.”

NIGHT_19 | Fish

[Begin with exaggerated scholarly authority. Then falter, suddenly unsure of his own memory.]

“Apparently, fish improves your memory. Or was it seaweed?”

NIGHT_20 | Never-Ending

[Initially wary, then increasingly stubborn and possessive. Finish with loud, reckless, drunken defiance.]

“This stuff is terribly dark, but I must drink it all. No one can stop me!”
